

Vision Éternel announces new album

It's been nearly three years since Vision Éternel's last album, "The Last Great Torch Song", released in March of 2012 through Abridged Pause Recordings. On October 31st 2014, the ambient band announced via their Facebook page, that "After months of silence, I can now confirm that a new Vision Éternel EP is in the works. I have been recording new material for an entire month now and hope to have a 6-7 song release finished by the start of 2015".

The new Vision Éternel EP will be released on a limited pressing of cassette tapes (as well as digital) in the first quarter of 2015, through Abridged Pause Recordings in North America and a yet undisclosed label in Europe. The album will be self-produced by Alexandre Julien, mastered by Adam Kennedy (returning from his work on Vision Éternel's EP "Abondance de périls" in 2010), and with artwork by Jeremy Roux.
