Vision Éternel Releases Music Video for Pièce No. Trois

Vision Éternel is celebrating its 10-year anniversary with the release of a new music video for the song "Pièce No. Trois". The song originally appeared on Vision Éternel's 2015 EP "Echoes From Forgotten Hearts", released through Abridged Pause Recordings. The footage was filmed by Jeremy Roux in 2012 and edited by Vasily Atutov in 2017. You can read an in-depth story about the making of the music video on Vision Éternel's website.

Today, August 28th, is an extremely special day because it's also the birthday of James Wong Howe, one of the most important film noir cinematographers and a huge influence to the band's visual style. Although he passed away in 1976, Google is also celebrating his birthday with a daily Google Doodle, check it out! Vision Éternel's music video is highly inspired by James Wong Howe's work.

"Pièce No. Trois" premiered on The Obelisk webzine on August 28th.

Vision Éternel is offering a 10% off discount on its new merchandise.
All you need to do is head on over to YouTube, subscribe to the band's channel, then "thumbs up" and comment on Vision Éternel's brand new music video for "Pièce No. Trois". Then simply send an email to info@visioneternel.com mentioning your support and the band will email you back a 10% off discount code within the next 24 hours. The code can be used on any and all items on the webstore and will be calculated as a 10% off of the total price at checkout.